

In the Abstract:

On new page 14 following the claims, please insert the following abstract:

Abstract

Methods, local processing devices, image editors, and computer program products may provide storable image effects in a local processing device. A signal may be used to transport such image effects to other devices. The local processing device includes an image effects store and an image editor configured to generate a new effect for application on digital images based on entries of a user. The image editor may allow storing of said effect as an effects file in the image effects store. A user can personalise effects to be used on pictures that have been taken. Such effects may also be exchanged between different devices.